The Résumé

Another Vital Passage

"The best years of your life were spent in high school." How many times did we hear that statement until we finally began to believe it? There were many reasons for that opinion but the main ones stressed that high school was one of the few places where we could experiment in choosing the type of person we wanted to be and come in contact with many types of people. Above all, we found that those years rewarded us with the freedom from responsibilities of the adult world.

We may not have been aware of all those developments in our vital passage through high school, but we did know that those short years were some of the most important times of our lives.

On Campus

We are the oldest and we take pride in our unique campus . . .

Anyone who ever visited another high school probably realized that Central was very different. In no other high school in Springfield could one find intricate mosaics, ornate chandeliers, grandfather clocks and brass doorknobs that decorated the classrooms and long hallways. Through these relics of a bygone era, Central's students learned history from a source outside of their textbooks.

A new roof, painting and "fixing up" was part of the work done to ready Central for the North Central Evaluation. A study was done by various groups to evaluate the different aspects of education that Central presented.

A spark of anxiety was caused by a fire on the third floor in the summer. Luckily, the fire was very minor and caused little damage.

the place where our vital passage begins.

Everyday:

Friends
arrive,
talk,
eat, and roam the halls.

Now You See It

So many things happened at Central everyday that it became impossible to grasp everything at once. Instead, we focused on the unusual and simply accepted the everyday occurrences. In our minds we struggled to store the good memories of talking with friends, the announcements that started the morning, the expressions on our teacher's faces and the rituals of signing lunch trays.

More easily remembered were those small catastrophes we met along the way.

Memories of sad days when someone or something made us unhappy, struggling through a losing streak in sports or not getting that "A". Such problems were only temporary roadblocks as we journeyed through our passages at Central.

The smiles, friends, even the upsets were things we often took for granted which made us rely even more on our memory to recall them. Time has proven that even the most insignificant detail becomes of major importance as we try to remember what made an event so special.

There were many unexpected and rare moments in the weeks we passed at Central. Pep rallies, assemblies, fire drills and elections caused many moments of excitement because nobody could predict their outcomes.

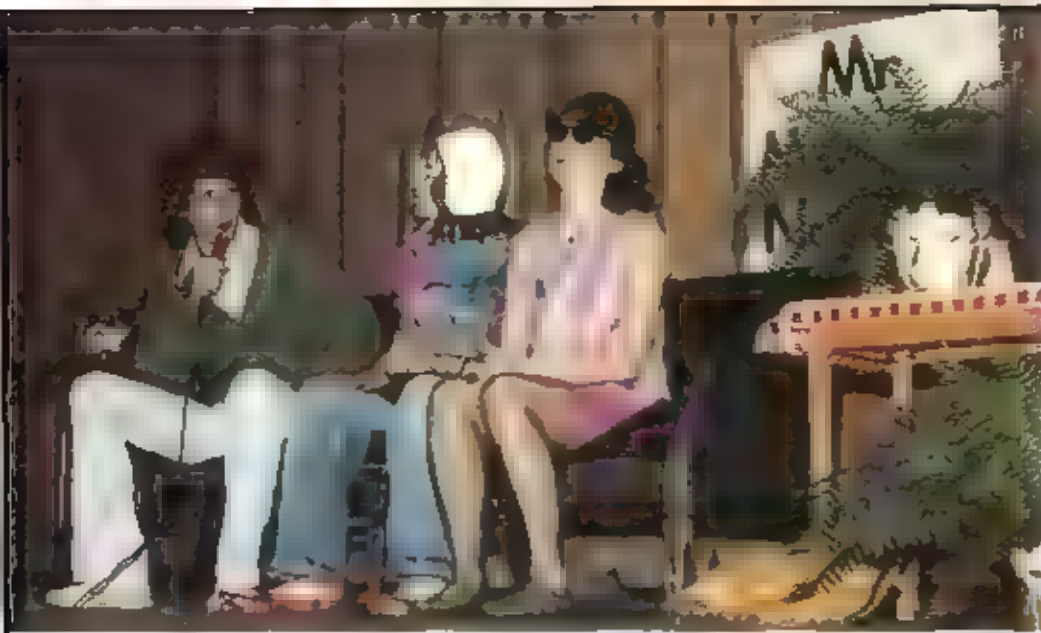

A smile on some of the teachers' faces was an unusual sight as we became used to seeing them frown at the homework we failed to do the night before. Even a vacation from schoolwork was a rare moment in some classes. Many considered it a miracle when the cafeteria didn't serve mashed potatoes for lunch.

Daily traditions were important at the oldest high school in Springfield, as were the events that happened only once or twice in the year.

Now You Don't

Things we don't often see.

Weekends

were made for freedom!

A weekend consisted of three nights and two glorious days which gave a rest from school. Many still had to contend with homework, but the time spent with friends was used to its potential. Weekends were also spent catching up on sleep, playing sports or on a date.

Some weekend activities were provided by the school with dances or sports competition. "Cruising" Kearney was a pastime that became expensive as teenagers emptied their gas tanks on the many trips they made up and down the street.

There were many plans made for each weekend. Some of those plans worked out while others didn't but everyone seemed to have enjoyed their weekend when they had to return to school on those dreaded Monday mornings.

were hot,

In The Sun

The summer of 1980 was one of the hottest in years. Missouri had more deaths caused by the heat than any other state.

Crops wilted under the sun's rays while gasoline prices sizzled. Many families found that the only way to afford a vacation was to travel within the state.

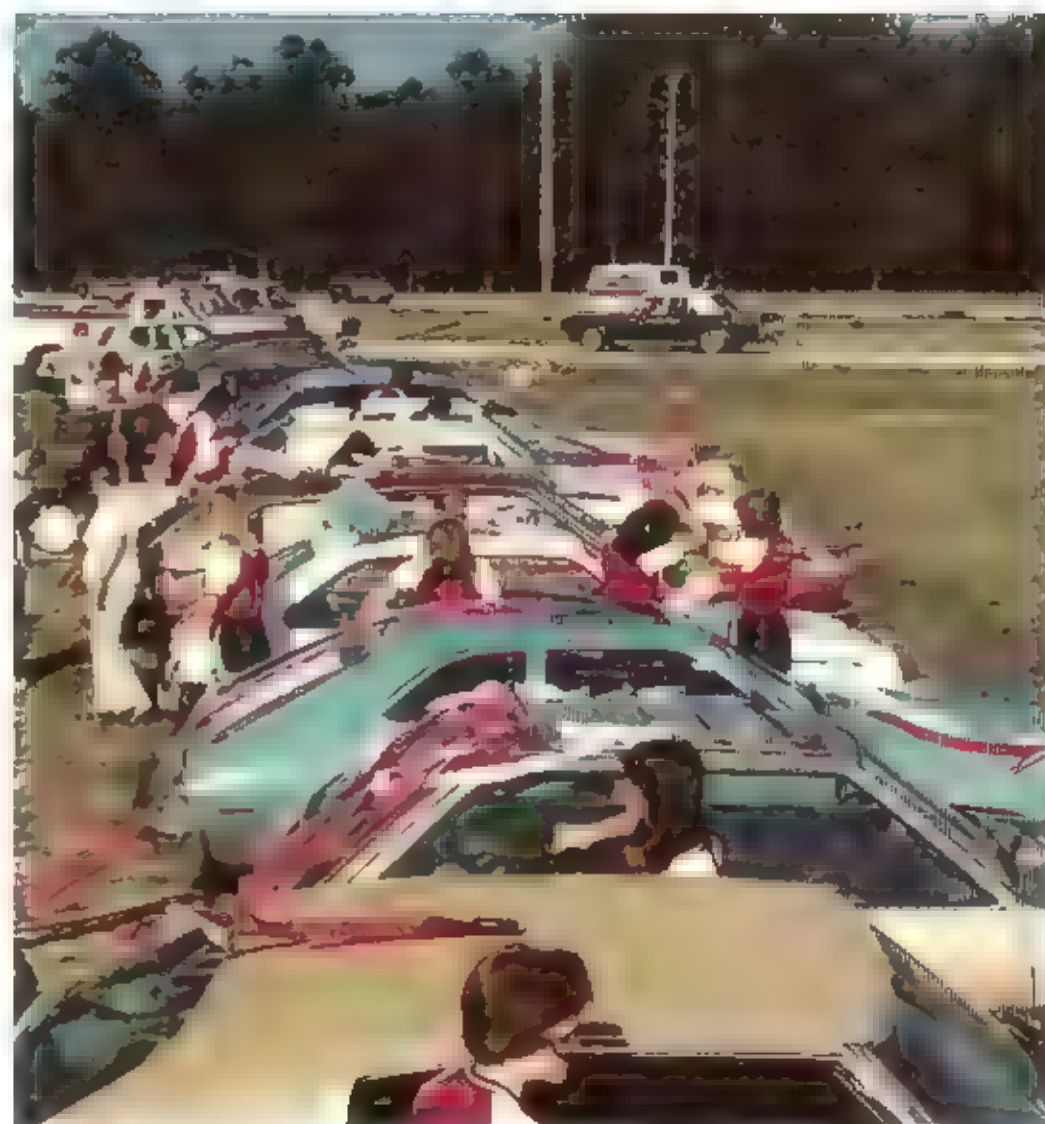

Branson was a popular tourist spot with Silver Dollar City and a new amusement park, White Water, which featured a large wave pool. This became a great way to beat the heat.

Kansas City also provided a new attraction with the Kansas City Royals' winning streak. The team's star, George Brett, attracted national attention as his batting average fluctuated close to the .400 mark. This helped the Royals into the World Series, which they lost to Philadelphia.

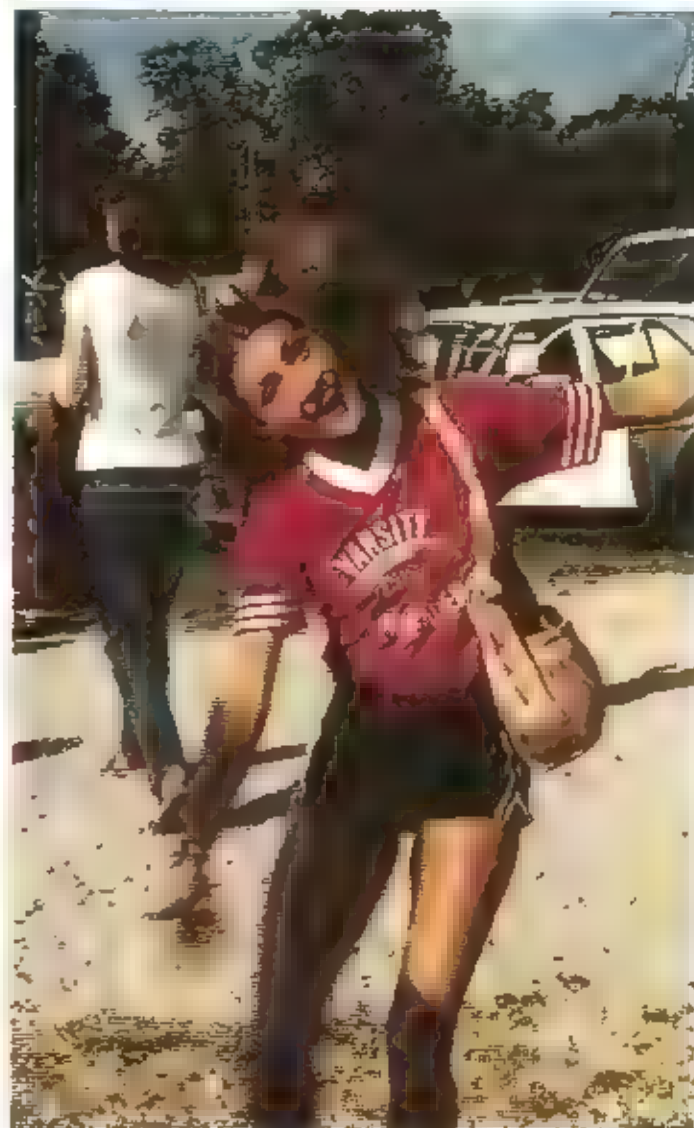

Football players and Kilties knew the agonizing torture of practicing in scorching temperatures. They had no vacation as their summer was consumed with preparations for the coming school year.

School symbolized the end of summer and freedom. Still school was looked forward to for the reunion of friends and more activities to occupy free time.

Anxious to begin the new year in style, students flocked to the stores to buy new clothes. Rummaging through racks of sweaters helped chase away thoughts of the hot and humid summer.

Around Town

There was a world that existed outside of Central High and most of us were caught up in it. Springfield held many attractions for us while the trends of the nation affected almost every aspect of our lives.

Movies were a popular form of entertainment, especially when the price dipped to $1.50 on Tuesday nights. The hits of 1980 were "Urban Cowboy", "Motel Hell", "Caddyshack" and "The Empire Strikes Back".

The music world changed from disco to soul and "new wave" songs. Queen recorded "Another One Bites The Dust" which remained popular for weeks. Diana Ross' "Upside Down" and Devo's "Crack The Whip" rocketed onto the music scene.

Television was affected by an actor's strike which delayed the taping of new shows until late fall. The one question on everyone's mind seemed to be asking was "Who shot J.R.?" as "Dallas" was one of the top shows on the screen.

Jimmy Carter, Ronald Reagan and John Anderson made the headlines as they vied for President of the United States. The election was held on November 4 and many CHS seniors found themselves eligible to vote.

Trends changed quickly but pizza remained the "classic" food which brought many visitors to Shakey's after a Friday night basketball game. Even though they may have been considered silly by some, the fads we followed added a great deal of variety to our lives.

Midnight Magic

Many weeks of preparation went in to make Friday, September 26, very special. Signs and announcements were made to promote the dance, flowers were sent to friends and decorations were made to turn the cafeteria into a place of "magic" for the dance. In addition, the Kulties and football players put in many hours of practice for the game and assembly.

Cheerleaders, pom pon girls and the band did their part to raise spirit in the festivities. Homecoming royalty was introduced along with the football players and their mothers in the sixth hour assembly.

One highlight of the assembly came when Kiltie Majorette Sheri Bills appeared to perform the traditional sword dance to the music of bagpipes. Tradition holds that a victory would be Central's if the swords were not hit together or stepped on. As Sheri lifted the swords off the gym floor, the roar of applause evidenced the fact that her dance was perfect.

The predicted victory unfortunately did not occur. The Varsity Bulldogs were defeated in a tough battle with the Webb City Cardinals by a score of 14-16.

That loss did not diminish any of the "magic" of the dance as couples flocked to the cafeteria to dance to the music of Bob Allen's sound system. The glittering stars and moons which decorated the walls added the final touch to the "Midnight Magic" of Homecoming 1980.

A royal event

Each class elected two girls to be attendants while the senior class chose three, one of which would be crowned Queen. During halftime, all eyes were focused on the field as the girls were driven around the track in Corvettes. When they completed a lap, the attendants were escorted onto the field to join in a formation made by the Kilties and band members who played "My Way."

The suspense grew until the announcement was made that Lillian Hawthorne would reign as Homecoming Queen of 1980. She was presented a dozen red roses and her crown and given another trip around the track. Lil joined her attendants on the throne for the remainder of the game and it was evident by the smile on her face that she was a very happy homecoming queen.

People behind it all

Everyone at Central deserves to feel some amount of pride for their involvement in Central's activities. Nothing would have ever happened without the people who worked hard to bring each event about.

Announcements, signs, decorations and spirit were all created by the students. Along with individual efforts, there were many clubs and organizations that promoted dances, candy sales and fund drives.

By simply buying tickets, yelling in the "Battle Cry" cheer or standing when the Kilties marched, each student showed his concern and involvement with Central.

Counting United Fund Drive monies collected from Central students and faculty is history instructor Mr. Guy Houdyshell and senior Sheree McDaniel. Central exceeded its goal by collecting $5,786.55.

Dressed to kill

"Goblins and ghouls" attended the annual Masquerade Ball on October 30, as Central students turned out in costumes to celebrate the Halloween season. Booths were erected by clubs which sold anything from tacos to dance partners.

The following evening, Central's Varsity Bulldogs were "spooked" out of a victory when the Kickapoo Chiefs ended the game with a score of 0-38.

In the halftime program of the Halloween night game, the Kilties made a witch's hat. Their performance featured the assistant captains who led the girls in the routine.

After the game, there were many options for entertainment. Some people turned into trick or treaters, others went to scary movies and for a daring few, after-game activities included "decorating" houses with toilet paper and eggs.

Sports

Aching muscles, long practices and strenuous workouts were all part of being an athlete. Dreams of glory from winning an event were often shattered when the reality of defeat occurred, but a good athlete learned to accept it and learn from competition.

Girls' sports never received as many spectators as the boys did, but several good female athletes were involved in sports events.

The honors, awards, letters or even the applause and cheering of the spectators was enough to keep Central's athletes working hard to improve at their sport and win for CHS.

Vital passes

When most Central students looked back on the 1980 football season, they thought mainly of the many losses that characterized the season. The Varsity squad did wind up without a victory, 0-10, but to think only about their defeats would be a discredit to the many people who put in a lot of time and effort to represent the Bulldogs on the field.

Practices to prepare the players for the tough games ahead began in August and were held twice a day. The sweat literally flooded the players but they kept up the hard work because being on the team meant a great deal to them.

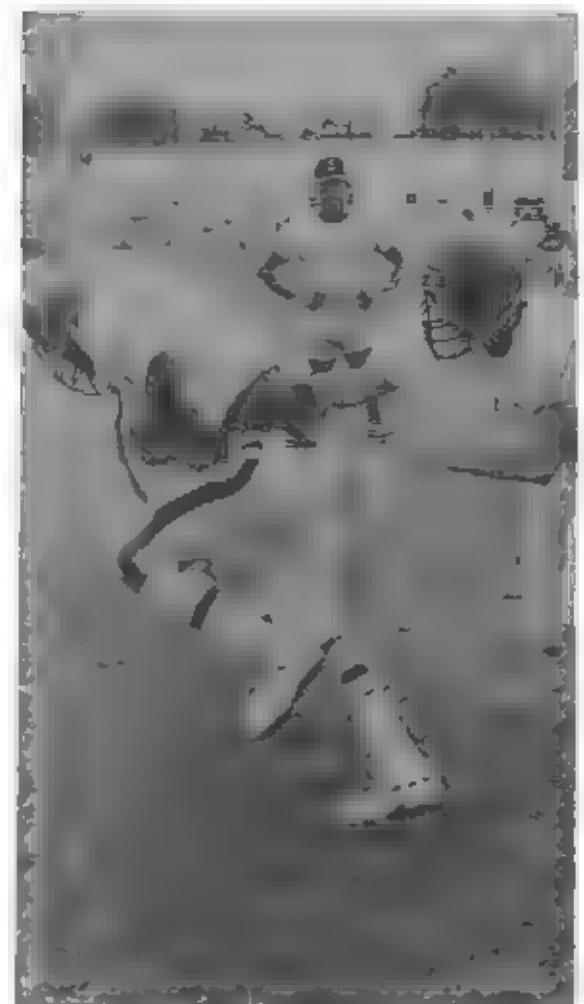

One problem that was related to the Bulldog defeats was that there were many injuries and sophomores were in the starting lineup who had little varsity experience.

The quarterback was sophomore Jim Mittan who completed 38 of his 95 passes for 40% accuracy and threw for 750 yards.

The senior lineup included running backs Jim Lee and Don Kern, linesmen Bob Davison and Howard Reed, split ends John Sterling and Henry Walker and defensive backs Lonnie Woodrow, John Shirpik and Carlton Laddimore.

The freshmen's record of 4-2 was one of the best for a frosh squad in many years. The J.V. posted one win making their record 1-7 and had the promise of developing into a strong team for the coming years.

On the road again

Central's 1980-81 cross country team placed in seven of their eight meets, including the competition at state. There were three returning lettermen, Rex Griffin, Lance Caswell and Jeff Henderson. In addition the team was assisted by two girls, Carol Cummings and Sandra Moore.

In state competition on November 1, Rex Griffin placed 74th out of 162 runners. He was the only member of the team to qualify for state.

In the 1980 track season, the 880-yard relay team was one of Central's most outstanding events. The team consisted of Jerry Tirres, Pee Wee Walker, Calvin Pearson and Ron Moses who captured first place in the district meet and qualified for state. The team placed thirteenth at state and ran their fastest time of the year.

There were several good members and individual victories on the girls' track team. The team often had difficulty winning matches against other schools in the 1980 season but there were many individuals who won in their events. Nedra Culp and Cynthia Jefferson were good examples of individual victories as they consistently had first places in the shot put and high jump.

Cynthia Jefferson went to State to compete in the high jump. She finished eighth in the event with a jump of 5'. She was one of two girls from Springfield who placed in State competition.

Swimmers make splash

While 6:30 was the time when most students awoke to begin a school day, Central's Bullfrogs and Bullfrogettes were in the pools and had already begun practice. The boys' team was headed by a new coach, Jim Hoodenpyle. They worked on their starts and turns and tried more for speed than yardage.

The 1980 girls' swimming season was successful in many ways. New swimmers joined the team and helped to post victories. Records were set all season and the girls placed in many meets.

The 400 yard freestyle medley team broke records and qualified for state. Shelly Langsford, Linda Prugger, Lindy Langsford and Tami Haun were members of the team that placed thirteenth at state. Shelly took second at state in the 100 free and the 100 breast.

She was given consideration for an All-American title ranking with her time of 1:09.5 in the 100 breast.

A banquet was held at the end of the seasons for both boys' and girls' squads.

Getting into the swing of things

The girls' golf team concluded their season winless, 0-5, but were able to improve their game scores as the season progressed.

The small team consisted of junior Paula Lewis, sophomores Cindy Cook and Kelly Lewis, and freshmen Jeanne Ballard and Brenda Hart. These girls swung their way to seventh place in the Ozark Conference tournament, seventh place in the SMSU tournament and sixth place in the District match.

Brenda Hart reflected on the season with her opinion that "Golf is a good sport. We didn't come in last but we never came in first in the tournaments."

Girls' tennis also suffered a bad season with only one win and ten losses. The girls had many individual victories in their matches but were not able to win as a team.

In the SMSU relays, Cindy Campbell won her first match but lost another match and was eliminated from quarterfinals.

The team recruited new members and had five returning letterwomen who were coached by Don York.

Team size ran small for the 1979-80 boys' golf team, but the small group of guys were able to post many individual victories along with a few team victories against smaller schools. Members Dean Hargis, John Sterling, Arch Watson, Mike Peterson and Mike Robbins all tried for a low score in every match and tournament.

The team finished ninth out of ten teams in the Ozark Conference Tournament at Grandview. In the SMSU Relays, CHS golfers placed sixteenth out of twenty teams.

The 1979-80 Boys' tennis team also had a small number of participants but was able to pull off many wins. Top-seeded singles player, Steve Krivohlavek, was able to defeat many of his opponents and advance in tournaments.

The team ended with a 3-8 record and fared well in Ozark Conference play.

Mats and bats

Junior Joe Atoe could have easily been named the star of the varsity wrestling team. This heavyweight wrestler had a 29-0-2 record being the only Central wrestler to remain undefeated. Atoe's most exciting matches came when he met up with Glendale heavyweight Bart Tindle and ended up with a tie.

Other important matches included the Lee's Summit High School Invitational on December 12 and 13 where Central placed seventh. Atoe was the only Springfield wrestler to take first in any competition. In the 185-pound division, senior Chuck Ogan took third. The matmen also competed in the Ozark Conference Tourney at Glendale where CHS took eighth place out of ten.

On January 31, Central took first place in the Parkview Quadrangular which ended the team competition. Next for the matmen was the MSHSAA District Tournament February 6-7 at Glendale High School.

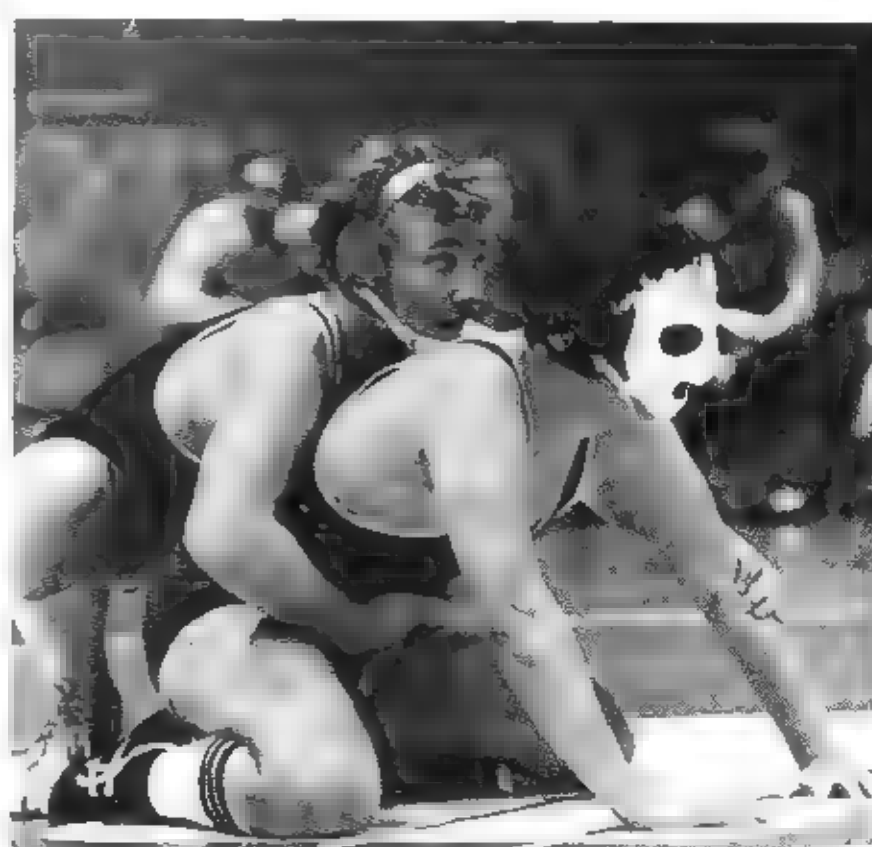

Central's sluggers hit their way to a record of 10-9 in the 1980 season. After finishing school competition, the team began the summer legion baseball program.

Outstanding players included first baseman Marc Doss selected for the All Conference squad; Greg Smith at second base and Roger Smith at shortstop were selected for the second team.

Girls jump high

Under a new coach, Miss Susan Alley, the girls' varsity volleyball team was able to claim six victories along with seven losses. The team faced tough competition with schools like Glendale who went through most of the season undefeated, but the girls kept up the hard work which carried them to fifth place in the Central Invitational Tournament, fifth place in the Ozark Conference Tourney and third place in Districts.

The junior varsity team also worked at getting their share of victories and was able to show their talents along with the varsity in an assembly for the entire student body.

Although a young team, the girls' basketball team worked well together to learn the skills necessary for victories on the hardwood courts. Connie Hodge was the only senior to lend her experience to the team. Liz Gray, Michelle Nimmo and Angie Marshall were three freshmen who faced the challenge of playing on the varsity team.

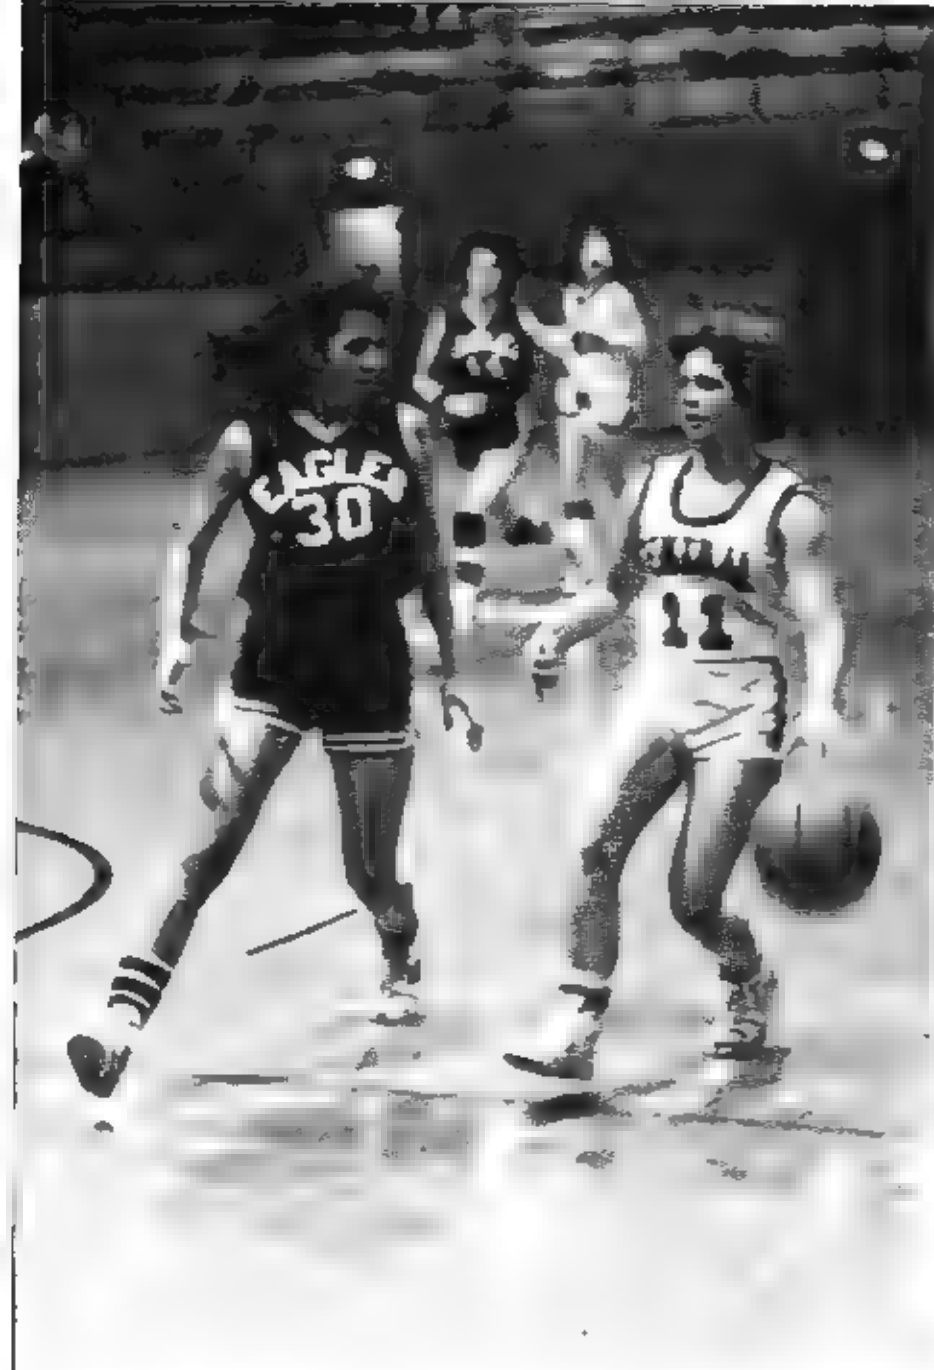

The varsity squad looked forward to the next year when they will have more experience than all the other schools.

The junior varsity had a good record in the 1980-81 season at 12-3. The girls never lost a game by more than four points.

Order on the court

Although a young and inexperienced team, the varsity basketball team began their season with a great deal of promise. This was the season that Coach Jim Ball sought his 600th career win as a high school basketball coach.

Hopes for a winning season rose early when the Bulldogs swiped wins from Buffalo, Lebanon and Ozark for first place in the Buffalo tournament. The team continued with more victories until they hit a tragic losing streak.

One of the reasons for the losses was the strong Parkview Viking team. Their 6'9" center, Greg Cavener, presented a special challenge to the Bulldogs as he was often Parkview's high scorer and towered above all other players.

On their third try for a win over the Vikings, it looked as if the Bulldogs would succeed. At half time the score was tied at 24-24. As the game progressed, the lead switched between the two teams until the Vikings grabbed control and ended the game 48-52.

The Junior Varsity team had a good share of wins with many of them gained in the last few seconds of the game. The freshmen A team came out with an impressive 10-3 record which showed that these Bullpups would become an even stronger Bulldog force. The B team also had a great number of wins which gave members the experience needed to become tough players.

The Varsity had their season extended when they took first place in the Lebanon District playoffs which advanced them to State competition. Parkview was the team the Bulldogs faced in the first round of State. The 'Dogs put out a great effort but were defeated 42-48.

Clubs

Some students lived a school day that ran from 8:30 until 3:25 and were involved only with school. Others were caught up in many activities that may have had them going from 7:00 in the morning to 10:00 at night. Many clubs and activities were responsible for lengthening a school day, and while not everyone enjoyed every single minute, they found that being involved was well worth the trouble and effort.

Some clubs had meetings before school while just as many met after the final bell. Practice sessions for some groups took up many free hours and required a great deal of determination.

Candy wrappers could be found in the halls almost every week after a club held a candy sale to raise money. Some students relieved their morning hunger pains by buying a homemade good at a club's bake sale.

Although not everyone belonged to a club, they supported the organizations by buying the candy, tickets and their involvement in many activities.

Whatever you said must mean “fun”

Spanish Club, also known as “Los Conquistadores,” focused their energies on selling candy bars to pay for the club’s banquets and spring trip. Foreign candy bars called Toblerone and Droste were consumed by Central students who helped the club raise a great deal of money.

The money was channeled into paying for the main dishes of the Christmas party held at senior Megan Riley’s home. Students had their dinner paid by the club at the spring banquet at La Casita. The bus trip to Kansas City was also paid for through the candy sales. The club toured the Nelson Art Gallery and Crown Center, a shopping mall full of stores.

Members of Los Conquistadores could be recognized by the red and white baseball style t-shirts with an emblem and the student’s Spanish name on the back.

French Club was an organization open to students who had taken or were currently taking a French class. There were many activities in French club such as afterschool tasting parties of French delicacies such as Perrier water and pomegranate juice. The club’s sponsor, Mrs. Laura Fleetwood, held the annual Christmas dinner in her home with each member bringing a French dish.

Helping out

Anchor Club, a new girls' organization at Central, was formed to give girls the chance to serve their community. During the school year, the major activity of Anchor Club was to build a foundation for the club to continue in the future.

Anchor Club helped the community by calling voters to get their opinions on the school levy which was voted on in February. At Loyalty, the club hung a spirit sign in the gym. They also helped the American Heart Association in the Rock N' Roll Jam-boree by collecting money with the aid of the Key Club.

The boys' Key Club was a service organization which was very active at Central. Approximately 30 members began the school year by arranging the halftime activities at Homecoming such as supplying the Corvettes, roses for the attendants and building the throne.

Every Wednesday before school, the club met to plan upcoming events such as the M&M candy sales, the vocational clinics and the collection of money for the Retarded Children's Fund.

Senior Joe Graves was elected as Lt. Governor for the Missouri and Arkansas districts of Key Club International and attended conventions in Little Rock.

In the spring of the year, Key Club held a leadership banquet which honored the sponsors and presidents of each club and organization.

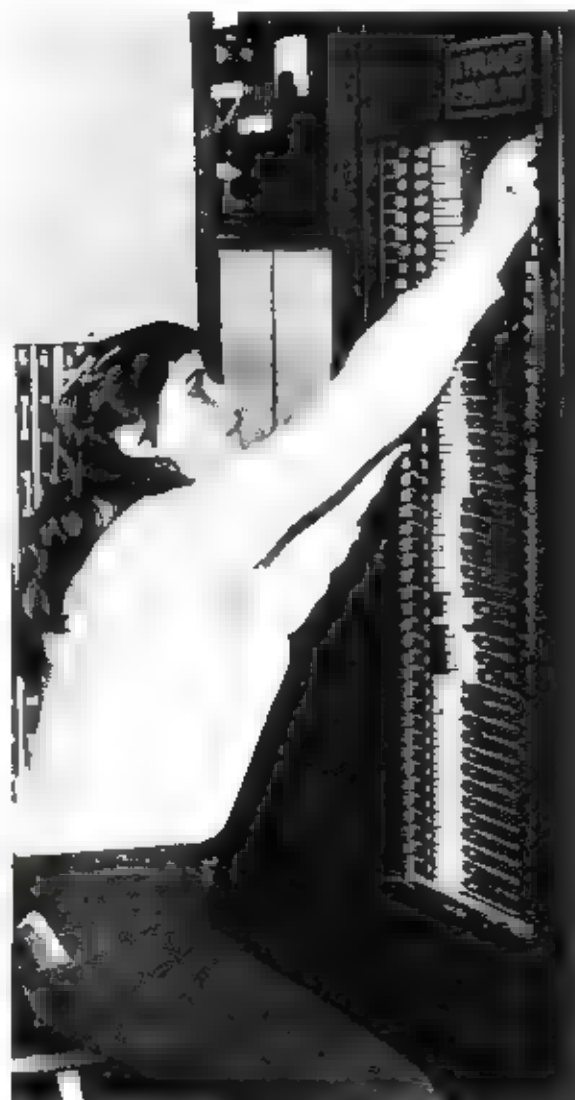

Phyllis Carlson, Anchor Club sponsor, addresses several potential members at the first meeting of the reorganized club.

Another opening

One of the most "bizarre" groups in the school was the Thespian Troupe 102 which met in sponsor Mrs. Wayne's room. The reason for the club's strange reputation was that the members were always pulling some silly antics which ranged from singing the "anthem" to the weird thoughts of the day. The anthem consisted of several versions in which club members faithfully pledged their loyalty.

Activities included a candy sale, a rent-a-date booth at the Masquerade Ball, a Christmas party, a spring banquet to honor actors and actresses and a refreshment sale at the Senior Sweetheart Dance.

Stage Crew was not only involved with school events but community events as well. Anyone who wished to work the lights, curtains and sound equipment and get paid for it could be a member of the crew. Groups such as the Sweet Adelines, Springfield Civic Ballet, Kiwanis Club and the Children's Theatre Production by the American Legion required stage crew's talents to keep their productions running smoothly. Members showed their pride in their job by wearing t-shirts.

Clubs picture the future

Future Teachers of America was an organization which gave experience to students wishing to become educators. Senior members of the club could become cadet teachers at local elementary schools. Terri Yates, Connie Hayhurst, Teresa Snodgrass and Terri Faulkner were student aids who helped students with reading, art work, along with other school work.

The club held a Valentine's Day party at Cox hospital's pediatric ward at which members gave cookies to patients. The club also had fund raisers to give scholarships to senior members and to host a Teacher's Tea at the end of school.

Other activities included a city-wide mixer at Parkview to acquaint members of each club and a Halloween party.

FHA stood for Future Homemakers of America which was a club for girls interested in running a household. Activities of the group included regional meeting at Silver Dollar City which afforded members with a chance to learn about the relationship of the home with the world of the future. Participants were able to sightsee the recreational park.

Officers were installed into Future Business Leaders of America with a candlelight ceremony in early September. This club, which gave interested students an extra insight into the world of business, also sold popcorn at the Masquerade Ball, celebrated Christmas with a pizza party at Godfather's and exchanged gag gifts and prepared for district FBLA competition at SMSU during the month of March.

Set your mind at ease

The Art Club members began their year with a picnic at Phelps's Grove Park. Next, the Masquerade Ball afforded the club a chance to make money with a ball toss and "portraits." Students sat for a portrait with the finished product turning out to be a drawing of a cute animal.

In October through December, Art Club sold stationery. The club also had a crafts sale which featured hat bands, paperweights and Christmas tree ornaments. The money went to pay for bus fare to Tulsa where they toured an art museum along with French Club members. Senior members of the club were eligible for scholarships which Art Club furnished.

Labyrinth was a student publication produced by the Cavaliers. This creative writing club sponsored a writing contest for students to submit poetry, short stories and plays for publication. The club also had a cover design contest which was won by Steve Rainey. The meetings of the club were used to edit materials and prepare for publication in May.

CHS Volumes was a small club for students interested in the library and reading books. Although attendance ran low, the group had a service project in which they donated 120 books to the Children's Home at Christmas. The books came through a book drive and were bought by money raised at bake sales. Club members bought t-shirts with logos about reading on them.

Shooting the bull's-eye

Ping pong, bowling, badminton and basketball were just a few of the activities available in Intramurals. Participants in this program met on various days of the week to wile away the hours with one of these pastimes.

Bowling was a major activity in intramurals which was played every Tuesday. Teams were formed and their scores were posted in order to keep the competition strong. At the end of the season, the team with the best average scores won a trophy.

Bows and arrows were not restricted to Indians, but could be found in the halls of Central High at archery club meetings. Members met after school on Thursdays and practiced their skills. On occasion when an arrow didn't meet its destination and was broken, members learned how to repair them with the direction of their sponsor, Mr. Gene Rushing.

Name that tune

For some students, being in a music class just wasn't enough to satisfy their musical abilities. That was the reason why students joined Madrigal and Choir and performed for many different people.

Madrigal was for students who auditioned to be a part of this singing unit. Performances were held at locations all over Springfield. The United Way Banquet, church banquets, a PTA convention at Howard Johnson's and a Daughters of the American Revolution meeting were just a few groups which Madrigal performed for. At the conclusion of the school year, Madrigal planned an out-of-town trip to compete in a contest.

Choir students were given some exposure in appearing before the public with performances at junior high schools, the fall concert, "An American Experience," which featured patriotic songs, and the winter concert. Choir also raised trip money by selling waste baskets with Central's emblem on them and an all-purpose cleaner for household use.

"Lookin' for the Right Words" is the tune seniors Jonna Adams and Philecia Harris sing in the American Experience concert.

Music on the move

"Central's Fight Song" brought to mind the Mighty Bulldog Marching Band which performed at football games, assemblies and parades to "up" spirit. Mr. John Follis was the band's music director who created many formations for band performances.

One of the most interesting performances at a football game was when the band was assisted by "Muppets." Three students dressed like Kermit the Frog, Fozzy Bear and Miss Piggy and ran around the field to feature different sections of instruments.

The band began the year early in August with practices to prepare for a parade in Sedalia. This was the first year in which hand signals were used to direct the band in steps and patterns.

The Marching Bulldog Band also participated in the Christmas Parade. An extra amount of interest was added to the band in the form of skaters who carried the banner. These volunteers were clad in the pompon girls' uniforms and were strapped into roller skates. They struggled to keep afoot through the long parade route.

The band played in the stands at many CHS football games as well. A bus trip to Lebanon was taken where the band helped the team by providing spirit.

Later in the year, the band sold candles to raise money for a two and a half day trip. Music was also rehearsed for upcoming musical festivals and concerts. Tryouts for majorette, flag girls and pompon girls were held in the spring.

Our bark is worse than our bite

The journalism class which met two hours in the morning could best be described as a "zoo." Students in these classes were responsible for the weekly newspaper and the yearbook and as a result of these responsibilities, many heated arguments occurred among staff members. There was also a great deal of freedom offered in the class as students worked on their own schedules.

The High Times staff held meetings each week to plan upcoming newspaper issues and discuss problems with past editions. The page editors assigned stories to members of the staff or to reporters in the Journalism I class.

The Resume staff had long-term deadlines which took a great deal of planning and work to complete. Staff members chased all over the school to find out who was in each picture and to identify what events were taking place. Stacks and stacks of paper, layouts, photos and copy were piled up daily for the staff to plough through.

A common occurrence in the class was the mysterious disappearance of several boxes of pens and other school supplies. Pens became almost as precious as gold to the aspiring journalists. The theft of three cameras throughout the year threatened the staffs' production, however the deadlines were met and the cameras were replaced.

Many interesting types of personalities evolved out of the hectic pace of the journalism class. One student would don a pair of black "gloves" made out of a plastic bag, a "sword" and "shield" made with various pieces of school equipment and sally around the room. Every student learned how to argue better and sometimes even succeeded in getting his or her point across to other hot tempered arguers.

Quill and Scroll was a group of students from the Journalism classes who were interested in other aspects of journalism. Members received a monthly magazine which told about trends in writing and a pin with their staff position engraved on it.

Talkin' for trophies

The art of public speaking was a skill worked at by members of Central's Speech and Debate Squad. The team competed in many contests throughout the state of Missouri. The out-of-town trips were taken on Fridays and Saturdays with members from the other Springfield high schools on chartered buses.

Events of competition included dramatic, humorous, duet, debate, extemporaneous speaking, poetry, oratory, prose, radio speaking and Lincoln Douglass debate. The squad had many individual and team victories including third place overall sweepstakes at the Buffalo tournament, sixth place at Parkway West's tournament in St. Louis and sixth place at Joplin Parkwood.

Special honors for Bruce Hartley, Doug Smith and Maryanne Peacock came in the form of an award known as the Double Ruby. These seniors achieved 500 points in National Forensic League competition and received a certificate and a pin set with a double ruby along with their names published in a national speech flier The Rostrum.

Speech I students participated in Neophyte tournaments. Neophytes are only open for speech I students in the five Springfield high schools.

March brought districts and qualifying for state for the speakers. The team competed in NFL districts at Drury, with competitors placing first in their events going to nationals. Provo, Utah will be the site for the national competition to be in June.

The following tournament was MSSHA at S.M.S.U. Top orators placing in each event went to state held in Columbia, MO.

The team concluded the year with the annual NFL banquet honored top senior interpreter and top senior debater.

It's all in the mind

Informal meetings before school were held for people interested in numbers. The main activity of this Math Club was participating in the SMSU Math Relays in the spring. Members formed teams for the competition after reviewing many mathematical facts.

Other activities of Math Club included a ring toss at the Masquerade Ball and plans for a candy sale to raise money for a visit to Silver Dollar City.

Members of Science Club were busy selling candy canes in the month of December to raise money toward a trip to Chicago in the spring where they toured several art and history museums.

Guest speakers from the crime lab at the Police Department and a speaker on nursing from Cox hospital spoke to members about different jobs and interesting techniques used in these fields. A tour of the medical labs at Cox Medical Center was also taken by Science Club members.

Mr. Guy Houdyshell was the sponsor of the History Club which worked to attend the History Bowl competition at SMSU in the spring. Members began studying about historical events in January and worked to keep the events in order until the time came for the team to compete with those from other schools.

Deep concentration was a requirement for members of Central's Chess Club. Each member was required to play eight games a month to be considered for tournaments played between schools. Jimmy Peacock and Angelo Keene were top seeded members.

In her first year as sponsor, Mrs. Gean Killough presided over club matches held every Wednesday. While members were concentrating on capturing their opponent's queen, they also munched on popcorn as a refreshment.

Plaids the fad: step right along

Three sharp blasts of a whistle started every Kiltie performance. As the tartan clad girls stepped down the aisles at assemblies or made formations on the football field, few people realized that behind their smiles, there was a nervous group of girls.

Twirlers clutched their batons in hopes that they wouldn't drop them in an overhead toss. Every bagpiper prayed that her instrument would play, the trumpeters hoped they wouldn't hit a wrong note and the drummers tried to stay on beat. Despite a few minor mistakes made as a result of these fears, the audiences continually stood to show their appreciation for the work the Kilties had done to represent Central.

Much dedication was needed to be a Kiltie. New members and positions were selected in the spring. Summer days started early with 7:00 practice on the parking lot or Drury field. The practices were used to teach steps and routines and to prepare for the All-Corps performance at Parkview on August 19. Even more devotion was needed when the Kilties posed on a hot August day in their wool uniforms for a picture which appeared in the football programs.

The Hello Day assembly was the next opportunity for the Kilties to perform. Later in September, the girls danced the Highland Fling followed by the Sword Dance in the Homecoming Assembly. There were also parades such as SMSU's Homecoming parade, Veteran's Day and the Christmas parades in Springfield and Branson. Other performances for the corps included marching at Maranantha Nursing Home and CHS and Drury basketball games. The girls also learned "Sheleighle," a mock war dance, which they presented in the Loyalty assembly.

Every Monday the girls had a meeting sometimes after school and other times in a member's home to make plans for upcoming events and fund raisers. The corps made money with a chili supper, a car wash at a drive-in and sold candy bars.

The Memories assembly was the last performance for the corps at which the new majorette was recognized. The corps said goodbye with a Kiltie banquet and a mother-daughter banquet in the spring.

All hear Let's cheer

What group of girls was lucky enough to wear wool sweaters on hot September school days and short skirts in the cold month of February? The answer had to be Central's cheerleaders who suffered through heat and cold to raise the spirit level at CHS.

This was the first year that different squads were chosen for football and basketball. Freshman football cheerleaders were chosen in the fall while the J.V. and varsity squads were selected in the previous spring. Later in the '80-81 school year, a two-week clinic was held to teach cheers for girls wishing to try out for basketball cheerleaders.

August practices started the year early for J.V. and varsity cheerleaders. New cheers were learned along with jumps and stack ups. The varsity squad participated in a cheerleading camp at Drury and placed third in overall competition.

During football season, the girls brought their enthusiasm to pep rallies, assemblies and games. The girls also brought soft drinks for the thirsty football team to drink after their game. At the end of the season, football players expressed their appreciation by presenting each cheerleader a red rose.

The squads raised money by selling class t-shirts with a logo on the front of each. They also delivered Christmas cards with candy canes to the recipients' homerooms.

Holding the leash

The ability to produce signs in mass quantities belonged to particularly one group, Cabinet. Members of Cabinet were frequently seen painting huge signs to promote upcoming games, dances and various other activities.

Cabinet also began the school day with morning announcements. Different members made the announcements which told about such events as the Pupils' Consolidated Fund drive. During this fund-raising event, students were able to donate money which would be used for many charities. The Blood Drive in the spring was another event which Cabinet sponsored to help the community.

Homecoming, Loyalty, the Masquerade Ball and other dances were made possible through the efforts of Cabinet. President Shelly Langsford and Vice-President Tracy Bruegman worked to make many activities possible. Enthusiasm was raised to higher levels through spirit days, assemblies and the many bulletin boards and signs which Cabinet produced.

The cafeteria was decorated for each dance with special decorations which required many hours of work from Cabinet and Art Commissioner Terry Keithley.

Often in the assemblies, Cabinet would act out skits which added a bright spot to the day. Assemblies Commissioner Johnny Marshall was publicly rebuffed by a five-year-old girl in the Christmas assembly which caused a roar of laughter from the audience.

Cabinet was also assisted with the efforts of General Assembly. Two representatives from each homeroom attended monthly meetings to discuss and plan upcoming school events.

Another group which helped out was the Principal-Student Communication Group. This group of students gave feedback to Mr. Espy about the good and bad aspects of CHS. During the North Central Evaluation, these students from the sophomore, junior and senior classes spoke frankly about their opinions on the school building, teachers and the attitude of students.

Who shot Bjorn Faulkner?

The fall play, The Night of January 16, was unique because it involved the audience's participation. The play by Ayn Rand centered around a murder trial with 12 people selected from the audience to serve as jurors.

The play was performed on November 20 and 21 in evening shows. Excerpts of the play were also featured in an assembly. Students were often in disagreement over who actually killed Bjorn Faulkner, a rich financier. Chris Hamilton who played Karen Andre was Faulkner's alleged mistress and accused murderer. Rose Barber portrayed Andre's defense attorney and Jeff Cheek was the district attorney. Both lawyers pleaded their cases to the jury and to Judge Ann Heath played by Murray Meyer.

"Witnesses" included Tracy Lewis as Nancy Lee Faulkner, Joe Graves as John Graham Whitfield, Jeff Davault as Larry Regan, Neva Moore as Mrs. John Hatchins, Karen Candie as Ingrid Jungquist, Leroy Herron as Officer Elmer Sweeney, Ed Clay as Dr. Kirkland, Mark Mingus as Detective Homer VanFleet, Megan Riley as Magda Severson, Frances Denny as Jane Chandler and Candy Bookout as Roberta Van Renselaer.

Members of the court were portrayed by Jesse Hubbard as secretary for the defense, Beth Jackson as the prosecutor's secretary, John Schurpik as the Clerk of the Court, Liz Lovett as a stenographer, Tony Helms played a bailiff and Lori Houdyshell was the prison matron.

The verdicts returned by the juries in each performance gave conflicting evidence of Karen Andre's guilt. The first night, the jury decided that Andre was guilty, but the next night she was felt to be innocent, so the question of her guilt still lingered in the minds of many Central students.

Mrs. McThing, was the title of the spring play which was presented on April 23 and 24. The script centered around Howard V. Larue IV, a rich boy who is a spoiled brat. His mother grows suspicious when he finally learns some manners. She then receives a phone call from a boy claiming to be her real son, and she sets out on a hilarious adventure to find him.

Departments

At the end of a student's four-year passage through high school, he or she should have built up enough knowledge in history, math, English, etc. to help him in future years. The different classes at Central offered that knowledge to students in demanding but sometimes fun classes.

On a typical day in the Halls of Ivy, one could see anything from Mr. Drye's dance steps which he performed for one of his classes to senior Carey Williams' snoring session in his Liberty and Law class.

Of course there were always the hectic moments of writing a research paper for Advanced Composition the night before it was due or memorizing five pages of dialogue for speech class. Some students took on extra responsibility when they were student aides to help teachers make things run more smoothly.

Bookin' it

One room in the school that every student used in their high school years was the library. Freshmen were involved in a two-week course that taught them how to use basic tools in the library. It also made them aware of what materials were available so when they faced writing research papers, they would have few problems. The library supplied students with over 20,000 books for reports or pleasure reading. The librarians, Mrs. Marsha Waitman and Mrs. Joan Estes knew every inch of the library and helped students track down vital information.

Over the summer, the library received almost 600 new books and three new magazine subscriptions. Old books were continually being taken out of the stacks to make room for the new ones, yet many old copies remained.

In the vertical file, CHS' second and third library books acquired in 1894, were saved for historical purposes. These books were a two-volume edition of Henry IV by Shakespeare.

Students who were plagued with paying book fines helped contribute over $400 to the school's activity fund. Books cost three cents each day they were overdue while magazines and reserve materials were more expensive at three cents an hour.

Reading between the lines

There were over 35 different classes in the English department which included journalism, English, French, Spanish, drama and speech. Freshmen and sophomores were required to take English I and II. Juniors and seniors were given their choices of courses such as Advanced Composition, American Literature, American Folklore and Classical World Literature which prepared them for college work. Other classes dealt with basic English skills in reading and writing.

Students involved in journalism classes spent much of their time running through the building in pursuit of a fast breaking news story. The yearbook and newspaper were produced by the J-II class. High school journalists spent two hours in the morning drawing layouts, shooting pictures and writing stories. The J-I class taught students the basic skills of reporting and writing.

"No comprendo" was an often used phrase in Spanish classes when students didn't understand a question. Mrs. Faye Jenne instructed her classes in Spanish grammar and conversational skills. The classes traveled to the Hilton Inn to view Spanish singing and dancing performed by the Boston Flamenco Repertory Company. Students in the advanced courses had to write an autobiography in Spanish and accompany it with pictures of themselves at various ages.

French students studied the grammar and history of France. They also exercised their vocal chords by singing French Christmas carols and other popular tunes from France. Mrs. Laura Fleetwood also had her classes write autobiographies in French.

Drama and speech classes taught students how to speak in front of an audience. Mr. Tom Gist who was new to Central taught speech classes.

Time passages

When was the War of 1812? Who is buried in Grant's Tomb? Most history students longed for questions as easy as these on exams but usually the questions were much tougher and dealt with the cultures of other countries.

Freshmen were required to take Modern American History. This class covered the history of the United States from the Civil War to the present. Sophomores and juniors had their choice of taking classes about American or world historical events.

Liberty and Law was a required course restricted to seniors which taught responsible citizenship and the laws of Missouri and the United States. The constitution test given in these courses was a big worry for most students as in most cases it was mandatory to pass it to get credit for the class.

The agenda of activities deviated from the subject of historical events long enough to enable Dr. Bodanske's class to win the Christmas door decorating competition.

The human mind and types of behavior was the subject matter in Mr. Rex Walker's psychology classes. He used his classes as subjects in experiments to give examples of what they had studied in their textbooks.

Coach Jim Ball helps two of his first hour students decorate their homeroom's door for Christmas.

Mr. Jim Nichols chats with his consumer math class before leaving for lunch.

Senior Teresa Bean hurries to complete her assignment before the class period ends

Senior Shirley Williams has her assignment checked by Mr. Del Pendergraft.

Many CHS students felt that math classes caused them many headaches but actually, math courses were valuable because they prepared students for their futures by teaching them to solve problems and perform computations necessary in life and in preparation for college.

Some lucky students weren't given homework every night or were able to finish before leaving school. Others, less fortunate, trudged home to slave over problems that seemed impossible to solve.

Second semester was livened up by the addition of a new computer course which taught basic computer functions to students who had taken Algebra I. Geometry classes benefited from new textbooks.

No matter how difficult an assignment may have been, students always could find pride in their accomplishments when they achieved 100%.

A test tube of a chemical mixture is examined by junior Mara Buffenbarger

Classes full of life

Each student had to have one credit of science to graduate which was usually achieved in the freshman year. Basic science courses included Earth Science, Applied Science and Biology I. Students who wished to continue in science had the options of Physics, Chemistry and Biology II. The rooms in the science department were filled with beakers, charts and microscopes which enabled students to perform experiments. The student "scientists" sported goggles which protected them from hazardous chemicals.

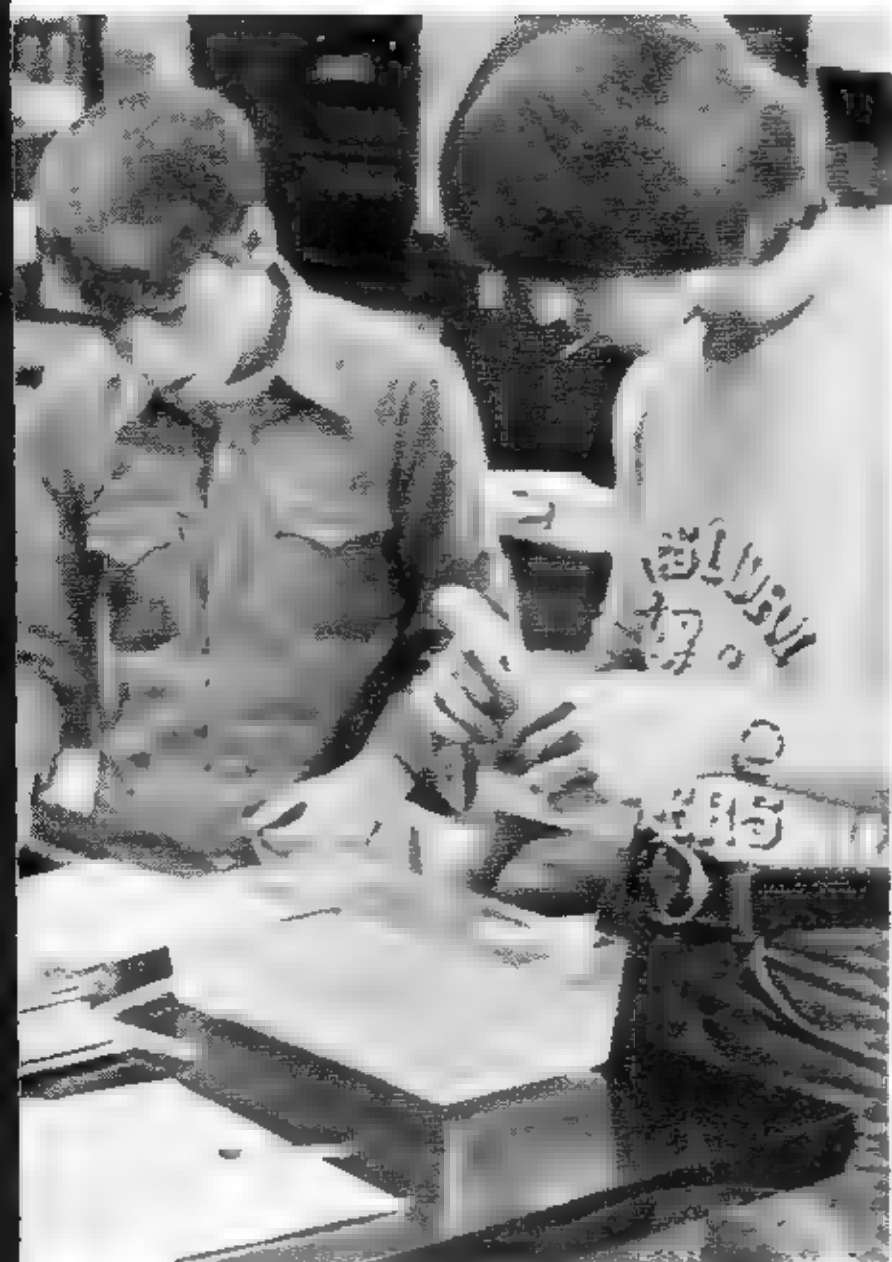

One of the most popular activities in science was the unit on dissection. Most classes worked with frogs but students in Biology II cut apart fish, white rats, sponges and grasshoppers.

The most interesting species observed were the "mad" science teachers. Their presence made the science department more enjoyable with their antics. Mrs. Teresa Shultz was a new addition to the science department along with a computer which helped Advanced Chemistry classes work on math analysis.

Mrs. Shultz described a moment in a chemistry class when they did "stinky" experiments. Fortunately it was warm weather and she was able to keep the windows open and the fan on so the air presently cleared. In another class, a solution caught on fire and the flames shot up about three or four feet but the students were able to get it under control.

Whenever students walked into their science class they could expect something different that day.

Science teacher Mr. Frank Lojko makes adjustments to an energy computer.

Creating a masterpiece was the goal of every student enrolled in an art class. Somehow their finished project was never good enough to hang in a major art museum, but students did win several awards and were able to take pride in their projects.

There were several hassles involved in art classes such as digging a pound of clay out from under one's fingernails or spilling paint on a pair of white jeans. Nevertheless, art students kept up their creative work and made paintings, pottery and household decorations.

One of the second semester assignments for Miss Connie Eveland's Art III class was to prepare the showcase in the main hall with their best individual art work. Each student was allowed a few days for his or her display.

To complete the art department a new kiln and a new teacher, Miss Brenda Mercer, were added.

Art instructor Ms. Connie Eveland helps a student working on an assignment in Art I.

Mr. Dan Henderson discusses art techniques with his Art II class.

Drawing a "masterpiece" for his Art III class is senior Chris Farabee.

Working on clay sculptures in Mr. Henderson's Art III class are seniors Keith Jafferty and Jim Bryant

Mrs. Barbara Buffington leads students through warm up exercises

Senior Kevin Hutchinson plays the piano for Music Theory students.

The freshman ensemble performs in the vocal music assembly

The halls are alive with the sound of music

The vocal music department, led by a new teacher, Mrs. Barbara Buffington, had many performances this year including the choral concerts, Christmas assembly, and performances at Heer's and junior highs.

Freshmen learned how to perform as a group in Chorus I. Girls' Choir was a separate class in which girls sang together because their voices weren't fully matured. Choir was open to students who had taken Chorus I and to those who had auditioned.

The Winter Concert was a special challenge to members of music classes because it required many hours of work. A huge backdrop of a snow scene was painted to hang on the stage. "Snow" was also used on a set during a medley of Christmas songs.

Girls' Choir functioned as a bell choir in the Christmas assembly. The bells were used to give a special touch to "Carol of the Bells" which was sung by music students.

Orchestra and band were conducted by Mr. John Follis. Band had many morning practices to prepare their formations for football games. Later in the year, they practiced songs for music festivals and contests. The orchestra also performed in concerts and assemblies.

An important event to students in both vocal and instrumental classes was the State Music Festival held in the spring. Long hours of practice on vocals or instruments were necessary to get a student's performance in good condition for a top rating given at the competition.

Freshman Venus Bryant "fiddles away the time" on her violin.

Getting the extras

Sophomores looked forward to their Driver's Education class because it brought the promise of obtaining a driver's license. Students learned basic fundamentals of driving a car with the use of lectures, textbooks, films, simulators, and actual practice on the streets of Springfield. Mr. P. D. Mullins was a new instructor in the course.

One of the most talked about events in Driver's Ed. was the "gross" films. Accidents and injuries were depicted in these films which stressed safe driving.

The Driver's Ed. department received two or three new cars each semester. Many students got their first experience behind the wheel when their lesson was to drive around town. There was one accident when a student driver ran over a curb and hit a fence but the damage was very minor.

With the completion of the course, students were able to get their driver's license and "cruise" the town.

"English as a Second Language" was the title of a course taught by Mrs. Brenda Davis to five students from Viet Nam. This course taught the basic fundamentals of English. Students began with pictures and objects and then began reading and discussion. The students increased their vocabulary by learning slang also.

Freshmen had Health as one of their required classes. This class taught them about care for the body and how to prevent and cure disease. Getting a heartbeat out of a dummy was a task students took up as they learned CPR procedures.

Helping make the English language easier for students sophomore Quyen Nguyen and Senior Danh Nguyen is E.S.L. instructor Brenda Davis.

Patrolman Crane discusses boat safety to Driver's Education students.

Driver's Education students "steer" their way through many hazards on the simulators.

Sweating it out

Learning to participate in group and individual sports was the main focus of the physical education courses. Many students also found that they had to learn to cope with sore muscles. One and a half units of P.E. were required in high school and the classes were offered to freshmen, sophomores and juniors. An optional class was open to seniors.

P.E. I and II dealt with team sports and physical fitness. Volleyball, soccer, badminton and softball were some sports that students participated in. In P.E. III individual sports were emphasized. Ping Pong was a new activity in the class. Lifetime sports were stressed in P.E. IV. This class had many interesting activities such as swimming, bowling, mini-golf, tennis, handball and golf. Boys were involved in weight lifting.

The boys' gym classes received new weights while the girls got metal tennis rackets and new tennis nets. Mrs. Susan Alley was also new to Central and she coached girls' volleyball and basketball.

Junior Carol Perkins, senior Julia Reeves, and juniors Charlotte Armstrong and Gidget Barton finish a conversation before working on an assignment in Child Development.

Sophomores Carla Rice and Marie Wilkinson wash silverware in a home economics class.

Junior Jim Mead washes dishes in Contemporary Living

Food for thought

Students who passed the east end of the first floor felt hunger pains as that was the location of the Home Ec kitchens. The aroma of delicious foods drifted into the halls as many busy cooks were preparing a meal. Those cooks were not always girls because many males were involved in Contemporary Living and learned basic cooking, sewing and cleaning techniques.

Central's Home Ec Department hosted a Crafts Fair with speakers who demonstrated macrame, quilting, carving, cake decorating and dough art. Students also went on field trips to department stores, nurseries and took walking tours to observe architectural styles of many old homes.

The hum of sewing machines helped to produce many garments for the Creative Clothing class. Each student worked at their own rate and produced five garments in the semester class.

Child Care and Personal Development classes were taught by Mrs. Sally Johnson, new to Central. Toddlers could be seen in the halls as they made appearances in Child Care classes.

Demonstrating cake decorating skills for the Christmas crafts festival is June Buchanan.

Juniors Chris Nall, Tracy McCandless and Diane Case enjoy little people in Child Development

Senior Tracy Sweets translates her assignment in shorthand

Taking care of business

Accounting, Introduction to Business, typing courses and Shorthand were just some of the many courses available to Central students which taught the ways of the business world. Various types of classwork stressed basic fundamentals.

Students in typing classes worked to raise their words per minute in daily timed writings. Shorthand students had homework every night which was to improve their skill in dictation.

Learning to work a ditto machine was part of what was taught in Office Procedures. This class prepared students to become secretaries and run an office.

Introduction to Business courses had the students working on practice sets. These were business letters and forms that gave students a sampling of what working in a business would be like.

Sophomore Georgetta Prier types a formal business letter in her business typing class.

Racing against the clock on a typing assignment are sophomores Tammy Sade and Renee Wallace.

Mrs. Helen Henley, business teacher, gives an oral quiz to her office procedures class.

Linda Mahan and Laura Roller work on completing an assignment in introduction to business.

Senior Cynthia Whitman and junior Beth Felin run off Christmas stencils for the business department.

Xuyen Nguyen, ESL student, works on typing a report.

“Wood” you like to see what we sawed?

The hum of power tools filled the air inside the industrial arts building. The I-A building was located a short distance north of the main buildings and its classes taught skills that students could apply to future jobs or simply for their own personal use.

Males dominated the classes but more and more girls were enrolled. The Home Maintenance and Repair class was designed to teach girls how to handle tools properly and repair leaks and other common household problems.

Designing houses was a common assignment of General and Architectural Drafting courses. These classes taught students to draw floor plans and elevation drawings of what a house would actually look like when it was constructed.

Power Mechanics students learned how different types of engines worked. They also repaired small gasoline engines and electrical motors.

Woodworking classes taught about wood sources and what products were constructed from them.

High interest, earning credit

Co-operative Occupational Education was better known as COE and was the only class where students were paid for their endeavors. This program placed students in a job for part of the school day. In addition to their job, students also had to attend a COE class where they learned various information about their current and future jobs.

Sponsors of the COE program at Central were Mr. Dan Clopton and Mr. Robert Rigsby. They taught COE classes and also co-sponsored the VICA club (Vocational Industrial Clubs of America) which provided students with various extra-curricular activities.

One project of COE students was the Toys for Tots campaign. All Central students were asked to bring used toys which COE students fixed for needy families.

In the spring, COE students held an employer-employee banquet to show their appreciation of the people who provided them with jobs.

Learning down the road

The Willard J. Graff Vocational Technical School on North Sherman housed classes which prepared students for various careers. Central's I-A building at one time was the home for vocational courses until the program was moved to its present location in 1965.

The Vo-tech program was open to students at all Springfield and surrounding area high schools. The classes were held three hours and ranged from Auto Mechanics to Ornamental Horticulture.

Electronic Data Processing and Computer Processing were two classes which taught students the various functions of computers and their uses in the future.

The Auto Body and Repair and Auto Mechanics classes taught the skills needed for working in a garage or simply to keep a car in good operating condition.

Senior Jill March concentrates on typing a formal business letter in secretarial practice.

Senior Eva Lindsey saws down a tree limb as a landscaping project in Horticulture.

Smoothing out a piece of wood on the lathe is senior Robert Moiser.

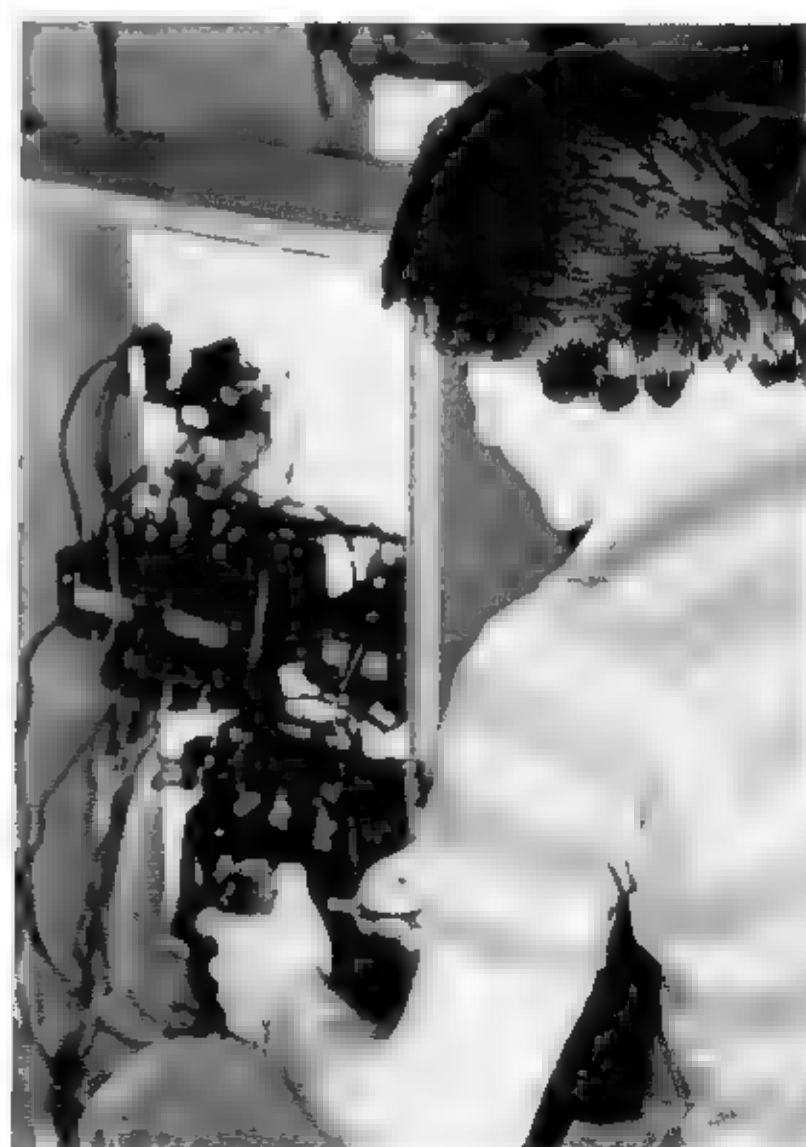

Seniors Gene Morton, Steve Bussard and junior Billy Holmes check the points in an engine during their auto mechanics class.

Working on a pipe for a sink in the Plumbing I class are seniors Jerry Tirres and Jerry Turner

Senior Raymond Ash checks an electrical circuit in the morning electricity workshop.

People

Central's student population was about 1,200 people. In that number, there were many different types such as the beauty queens, super jocks, brains, wallflowers, nerds and even those that were considered normal. These classifications were only to justify one's own behavior but the fact was that everyone was just as good as another. In fact, everyone was equal in the commonly shared problem of the five minute break between classes. This was not considered to be a sufficient amount of time for students to go to their lockers, the restroom, talk with friends and still be able to make it to class on time. Some were even more unfortunate when they had a class in another building and had to race through the campus before the tardy bell caught them

Freshmen

Being the low man on the totem pole was a fact that freshmen had to face. A new school with so many people and activities often overwhelmed the frosh until they gradually grew accustomed to the high school routine.

A wise freshman knew to refrain from buying "elevator tickets" and ignore the jokes about dumb freshmen. The "baby" class at Central spent a lot of their time planning evil schemes to get revenge on the upcoming freshmen that would have to fill their shoes.

The major project that the freshman class had was just to survive the first year of high school. Class meetings and attending other school functions were an important part of unifying the class so that they would keep up the pride that the other classes had for Central.

Sophomores

Sophomores were caught up in the middle of high school life. Most considered themselves to be wiser than freshmen, but were not yet accepted by the upperclassmen.

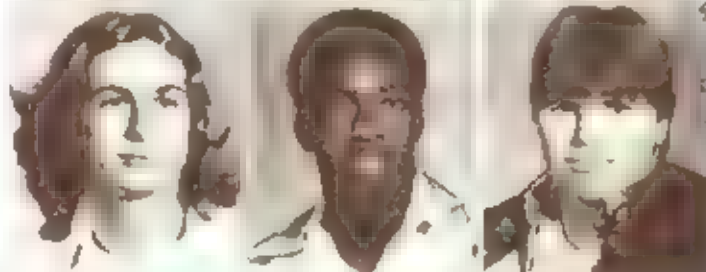

Nevertheless, the sophomore class was very busy with many activities such as the Freshman-Sophomore Mixer and a haunted house at the Masquerade Ball. Small groups of friends began to spring up and the few who had their driver's license got the job of chauffeuring their friends around town. Near the end of the year, sophomores earned that part of being included with the upperclassmen was acting grown up, so many put on their best behavior in the hopes of impressing the "big kids."

Juniors

The first year as an upperclassman was very exciting as juniors were able to become involved in more activities. Large groups of friends were formed and went places together. Many had their first experiences with dating when mom and dad at last gave their consent.

Juniors sported the fact that they were finally upperclassmen by wearing their new class rings. Several people were denied the chance to run around with friends as often as they liked, because they were working at a job. However, they didn't seem to mind too much when their paycheck came in and they could splurge on a "personal luxury."

Seniors

Most seniors felt as if they were on top of things and were in control of their lives. After all, they had been through the high school routine three times and finally knew what was going on.

The large group of friends built up in the junior or year may have dwindled down to three or four close friends, but more time was devoted to dating. Even more of a senior's time was spent to plan for the future and decide between college, marriage or a job.

College tests, measuring for caps and gowns and fund raising activities for the class gift and prom were major activities that seniors were caught up with. The sad part about being at the top was that it lasted for just a short time and the next year would have to be spent in getting used to a new lifestyle and maybe climbing back up to the "top."

Administration Serves CHS

Educational programs received direction and suggestions from the administrative system. The administrators were housed in the Administrative Service Center right off Central's campus.

There were many special people involved with Central and the other high schools as well. Dr. Joe Kuklenski retired as Superintendent of Schools after many years in the Springfield school system. Mrs. Virginia Woodring, city-wide journalism coordinator, helped the publication staffs of the high schools by giving them her ideas and making sure all deadlines were met.

Even closer to Central, Mrs. Delores Brooks became the new assistant principal. She previously was a counselor at Central and returned to the school with special knowledge about CHS students and their activities. Most clubs and organizations went to Mrs. Brooks for approval of their projects.

Principal Charles Espy continued in command of Central and kept things running smoothly. His Principal-Student Communication Group gave him input from students about their feelings about Central and the improvements they felt could be made.

Lending a Hand

The teaching staff at Central was a very well trained and reliable group of individuals who did their best to get students through the passage from high school to adult life. Teachers earned reputations as being nice or "grouchy," yet almost all students, whether they admitted it or not, benefitted from their classes in some way.

Central was kept clean by a number of people known as the custodians. They could be seen mopping or emptying trash or doing some job that would keep the building in good shape.

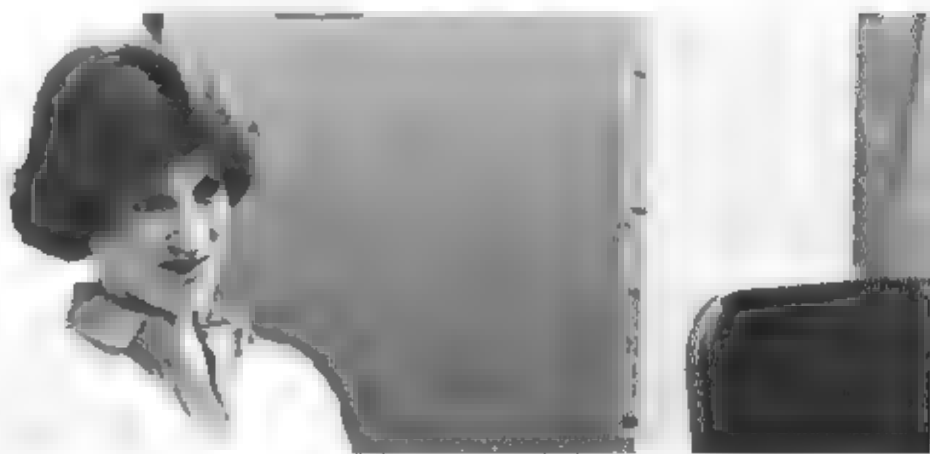

The price of school lunches was 65 cents, almost double the price that Springfield high school students paid when they started first grade. The cooks prepared food that the typical teen enjoyed, even though there were complaints that, "the hamburgers aren't as good as MacDonald's." However, the food was always consumed in mass quantities.

Students were helped in many personal problems by the deans, Mr. Jerry Hair and Mrs. Marie Napier. Their duties also included attendance, discipline and assistance to organizations when necessary. A familiar face in Mrs. Napier's office was that of secretary Mrs. Norma Nickie who left Central because of her husband's transfer to another city. She was replaced with another helpful and efficient aide, Mrs. Marjorie Bradley.

The counselor's offices were always filled with students seeking help with personal problems, scheduling, career and college plans. The counselors worked up with each class until their graduation. A new group, started by the counselors helped students deal with their problems and peer pressure.

A change of seasons

January was livened up with Loyalty 1981 — "A Winter Fantasy." The highlight of Loyalty was a dance on January 23, but festivities began long before that.

The week before the dance, classes held meetings to nominate couples for king and queen of the dance. They also chose themes for dress-up days. Seniors dressed in their own fantasies, juniors were costumed as rich or poor people, sophomores were "urban cowboys" and freshmen chose to be famous people.

For a couple of weeks, cabinet members sold chance tickets while the senior class sold carnations to be delivered the day of the dance. Kilties spent their mornings practicing the "Sheleighle," a mock war dance performed by Scottish clans which the girls executed in the sixth hour assembly on the 23rd

The assembly also featured a dance routine by the cheerleaders to Billy Joel's song "It's Just a Fantasy." Cabinet members Gary Gray and Russ Robinson posed as Central's basketball team to take on Greg Smith and David Johnson who represented Glendale in a skit which resulted in a Bulldog victory.

The actual contest ended with a Falcon win as the Dogs were tromped 44-59. Disappointed fans soon cheered up as they hit Central's dance floor to begin the Loyalty dance.

The cafeteria was decorated in blue and lavender with eskimo decorations for couples. The Arrison sound system allowed students to dance to their favorite tunes. Later, a crowd gathered around couples who were chosen as the Loyalty king and queen.

The Loyalty Dance provides a good time for many Central students.

Another Vital Passage

The conclusion of the 1980-81 school year marked the end of just one passage in a student's life. The future held many opportunities and new situations for each person. As students attempted new endeavors, they found themselves caught up in more and more learning experiences.

Almost everyone longed for the "freedoms" of adulthood. However, some national events made young people realize the responsibilities required of an adult.

Males 18 years of age had to register for military draft and President Reagan's budget cuts forced each American to cut back on personal spending. The nation had great celebrations with the release of the 52 hostages held in Iran but also mourned the death of ex-Beatle John Lennon. These events seemed to bring a sense of unity to the nation and also made teenagers see the importance of maturity in dealing with both victories and crises.

The Memories Assembly and the Senior Prom brought the realization that the year was finally over. Groups, organizations and memorable events were summed up in the annual Memories Assembly held at the very end of school. The senior class chose the song "Celebration" by Kool and the Gang as the theme of their prom which was held in the Drury Ballroom.

Goodbyes to friends soon followed. Some people would see each other all summer, others would be reunited in the fall and some would never see each other again. Yet everybody had one thing in common. They would go to new events and certainly

The Resume Staff feels that high school, whether we realize it or not, is a small but important part of our lives. We are growing and maturing together on our way to an adult world. For this reason we chose as our Resume theme, A Vital Passage.

Every student at Central has had a part in constructing the Resume. I would like to thank the many people who contributed their time and help, the teachers who allowed the staff to interrupt and miss classes during hectic times and my great staff members.

George,

But a great guy, a little crazy but a great person. I wish ya luck in everything ya do. I'll always remember 1st hour. Everybody was always getting in trouble in that class. Must be nice to be a Senior. Well stay sweet and nice HxHxH

Friends

Always Love ya,

Dandra

Whelan

George,

I may not know you very well, but stay sweet & handsome. So bad I don't know you that well cause if I had of you would of to every party I had. I'm very ugly cause I'm trying to rush. If ya need any help call me 866-0729. I'll will help good as I can. I'm so happy I came to Centuar (oops!) Because I am happy to be here to know you. That means friends! But when I walked in first hour I liked you, but found out you was married. Still like ya but out of luck!

Love Ya
A lot,

Melinda

George

you are a nice person and you are sweet to and I'm glad that you are my friend and I hope that we can become friends always will I'll talk to you later.

your friend
